Classic Car Insurance Quote

Some people think of classic cars as the transport of eccentrics and TV detectives. Others consider them to be glamorous, expensive, and high maintenance status symbols. But the reality is that many classic cars simply do not fit these stereotypes. A classic car is easy to rave about but incredibly hard to define. Who is to say that a cherished Austin A40 in a supermarket car park is less of a 'Classic Car' than a Mark II Jaguar at Ascot? And that's where you need to know what is and isn't classic – it will make a huge difference to your car insurance premium.

Top tips for getting the best deal

- It is widely reported in the motoring press that classic car insurance is far cheaper than a modern car policy but it is important to be vigilant and well informed.
- The condition and scarcity of a classic can vary dramatically, and an owner's perception as to the value of his beloved car can often be at odds with his insurer's valuation in the event of a claim.
- Search for a specialist insurer, they are more likely to provide specialist assistance and provide a better rate.
- It is vital that you take out a guaranteed agreed valuation when insuring your classic car.

A genuine agreed valuation is the value guaranteed by the insurer should the car be written off or stolen. Make sure you check that your valuation is 'guaranteed', as some insurers have refused to pay out the full amount, despite the owner believing that they were fully covered.

Insurers may or may not make a small charge for an agreed valuation but it can be a false economy to omit it from your policy if the pay-out on your claim turns out to be hundreds or even thousands less than you thought. So, if you are surprised to learn that insurers consider your beloved 1970's Datsun Cherry a classic, make sure you take care when choosing your car insurance policy!
